How much is 'conflict' costing You, Your Teams and Your Organisation?

Estimates on the cost of stress and stress-related illness, primarily caused by conflict between individuals and within teams, organisations and communities, range between £5 billion and £12 billion per year (that's around £500 each year for every working adult within the UK).

Evidence shows that conflict causes:

- Stress, Anxiety and Pressure
- Poor Performance
- High Staff Turnover
- De-Motivation
- Absenteeism
- Low Morale
- Anger and Resentment
- Aggressive and Threatening Behaviour

Leadership models where teamwork and shared leadership is becoming a critical requirement within Organisations mean that adopting effective solutions to support ongoing Leadership Development Programmes is even more important. Individuals not in Leadership or Followership roles are potentially not in full agreement or 'buy-in' and therefore must be in 'conflict' which ultimately can be very damaging and costly to any Team. Leaders at Every Level within your Organisation have to know how to deal effectively with conflict to really Maximise the Potential of Your People.

- 1 They share the Leadership
- 2 They encourage one another
- 3 They communicate constantly
- 4 They share a common direction or goal
- 5 They have a shared community
- 6 They travel on the strength of one another
- 7 They accept help when they need it
- 8 They look for ways to utilise others to make life easier and to support others in the same way
- 9 They stand by one another, helping one another in difficult times, supporting one another to regain their place in the team and community
- 10 They have a recognised lead and each goose has a place in the formation before they take flight.
